A second look.

PLAIN SIGHT

Five source images. Three studies. A practice of attention.

2026 / EDITION 03

Nothing new. Something noticed.

A wall beside a seated figure. A stem connecting a dark flower to a clear glass. A chair holding the scale of an empty room.

The material does not change when we look again. The relationships do. This edition moves between the whole image, its existing editorial crops and new notes on what those edits make visible.

This is a self-directed studio concept by Jocelyn Martinez. All five original image scenes are AI-generated. The eleven derivatives are crops, not additional photographs. No real shoot, commissioned talent, camera settings or client results are implied.

The source index.

01 A posture, a pause

Gestures / 2 derivative crops

SOURCE PAGE 06

02 The weight of a fold

Gestures / 2 derivative crops

SOURCE PAGE 08

03 A stem holds the room

Arrangements / 2 derivative crops

SOURCE PAGE 12

04 Objects in conversation

Arrangements / 2 derivative crops

SOURCE PAGE 14

05 A room held by light

In Between / 3 derivative crops

SOURCE PAGE 18

The frame is a choice.

01 Observe

Give the whole image time. Notice where the subject sits and what the surrounding space contributes.

02 Reframe

Place a crop beside its source. Ask what gains emphasis and what information is lost.

03 Read

Follow the sequence. The next image can offer context, sharpen a detail or provide a pause.

STUDY 01 / PEOPLE · POSTURE · FABRIC

Gestures.

A body.
A fold.
A pause.

Two human scenes, observed from different distances. Keep room around the gesture before moving closer.

ORIGINAL GENERATED SOURCE 01

A posture, a pause

The empty wall is active space. Keeping the chair and the cast light in the frame makes the posture feel situated, rather than isolated.

SOURCE 01 / FULL COMPOSITION — NO ADDITIONAL CROP

FRAMING DECISIONS / SOURCE 01

Presence, or the space beside it.

CROP 1 / FROM SOURCE 01

Bring the posture forward

A square edit brings the face, hands and folded trousers into one compact reading. It gains intimacy and gives up the breathing room of the original.

CROP 2 / FROM SOURCE 01

Let absence take the lead

Moving attention toward the wall makes the figure partial. The chair edge becomes a trace of presence; use this as a pause after the full scene, not as a replacement portrait.

Compare both with the original: plain-sight/light-table.html?source=gesture-seated

ORIGINAL GENERATED SOURCE 02

The weight of a fold

The full portrait holds the relationship between the turned head, raised hands and falling cloth. Its vertical format lets the fabric carry the movement.

SOURCE 02 / FULL COMPOSITION — THE FOLD CONNECTS HAND AND BODY

FRAMING DECISIONS / SOURCE 02

From gesture to material.

CROP 1 / FROM SOURCE 02

Follow the turn

Removing the lower fabric directs attention to the turn of the head and the hand at the shoulder. The composition becomes a gesture of attention rather than a study of the garment.

CROP 2 / FROM SOURCE 02

Read the material

Taking the face out of the frame changes the subject to light and material. The diagonal fold carries the eye across the edit; this detail belongs beside its parent image.

Compare both with the original: plain-sight/light-table.html?source=gesture-fabric

A gesture leaves a trace.

SOURCE 01 / SEATED

SOURCE 02 / FABRIC

These are two original generated scenes. Their four derivative crops explore posture, absence, attention and material. The sequence gets its variety from scale and framing, not a fictional fashion shoot.

STUDY 02 / OBJECTS · TEXTURE · BALANCE

Arrange-ments.

One dark flower. One clear glass. A small conversation.

Two still lifes organized by the relationships between ordinary things.

ORIGINAL GENERATED SOURCE 03

A stem holds the room

A narrow stem connects two different visual weights: the dark flower above and the glass below. The linen and stone keep the arrangement from becoming perfectly symmetrical.

SOURCE 03 / FULL COMPOSITION — FLOWER, GLASS, LINEN, STONE

FRAMING DECISIONS / SOURCE 03

The stem, or the weight below.

CROP 1 / FROM SOURCE 03

Keep the vertical conversation

This tighter vertical edit keeps the flower and water connected while removing the pedestal. It makes the fragile stem more prominent and the setting less important.

CROP 2 / FROM SOURCE 03

Give weight to the base

The base edit exchanges the flower for three surfaces: glass, linen and stone. Their different edges and textures become the subject. The absent flower is understood through the original.

Compare both with the original: plain-sight/light-table.html?source=arrangement-bloom

ORIGINAL GENERATED SOURCE 04

Objects in conversation

The vase anchors the left side while the branch reaches right. The glass and fruit bridge their different scales. A diagonal band of light ties the objects together.

SOURCE 04 / FULL COMPOSITION — A HEAVY VASE AND A REACHING BRANCH

FRAMING DECISIONS / SOURCE 04

Weight and counterweight.

CROP 1 / FROM SOURCE 04

Collect the visual weight

The lower, wider edit gathers the vase, glass and fruit into a dense cluster. It strengthens material relationships while reducing the original's airy branch and wall.

CROP 2 / FROM SOURCE 04

Let light organize the image

Removing the heavy vase leaves the branch and glass suspended across the light. The diagonal now organizes the image. Compare the quieter balance with the clustered object edit.

Compare both with the original: plain-sight/light-table.html?source=arrangement-table

Objects are always in dialogue.

FROM SOURCE 03 / BASE

FROM SOURCE 04 / OBJECTS

STUDY 03 / SPACE · GEOMETRY · LIGHT

In Between.

Almost nothing. And enough.

One room. Three closer readings.

ORIGINAL GENERATED SOURCE 05

A room held by light

The opening, chair and triangle of light establish three different geometries. Keeping them together makes the empty space feel inhabited without adding a figure.

SOURCE 05 / FULL COMPOSITION — ONE ROOM, NOT SEVERAL LOCATIONS

FRAMING DECISION / SOURCE 05

Make a threshold.

CROP 01 / FROM SOURCE 05

ORIGINAL / SOURCE 05

This tall edit removes the chair and lets the opening become a threshold. The vertical edge frames a small glimpse outside, while the floor light keeps the space connected.

FRAMING DECISIONS / SOURCE 05

A trace of presence.

CROP 02 / CHAIR

The chair gives the room a human scale even when no person is present. Removing the opening concentrates the relationship between its rigid edges and the sloping light.

CROP 03 / SHADOW

The wider floor edit connects opening and chair through shadow. It changes a vertical room into a horizontal sequence, useful as a closing image after the more enclosed crops.

One room. Three readings.

ORIGINAL / SOURCE 05

CROP 1

Threshold

CROP 2

Human scale

CROP 3

Light across

The derivatives stay attached to their parent. A contact sheet can reveal an editorial decision without pretending to document exposures that never happened.

Different subjects. The same attention.

SOURCE 02

Gestures

SOURCE 03

Arrangements

SOURCE 05

In Between

A fold, a stem, a band of light. Repeated warmth and directional light connect the image world. Different spatial relationships keep the three studies distinct.

Look once.
Look again.

CREATOR

Jocelyn Martinez / self-directed concept, visual identity, editorial art direction and interface reconstruction.

IMAGE PROVENANCE

Five existing AI-generated source scenes. Eleven existing derivative crops. New authored framing notes. No shoot, real models, camera settings, client campaign or user-study findings are implied.

PRODUCTION

24 A4 portrait pages, 210 × 297 mm. RGB digital-review PDF; no external bleed, commercial preflight or physical proof. Effective image resolution varies. A printer-ready edition needs source-resolution and color-profile review.

TYPE & SOURCE

Bodoni Moda and DM Sans, embedded under SIL Open Font License. Editable layout source: plain-sight/src/build_publication.py. All original source images and the previous edition are preserved.

Continue the observation online: jocelyn-martinez-ui.github.io/plain-sight/

The ordinary, observed differently.

PLAIN SIGHT / STUDIES 01–03

FIVE SOURCES. ELEVEN CROPS. A SECOND LOOK.