

Editorial system overview

The publication uses a six-column grid per page, mirrored margins, a 14-point baseline rhythm, and a limited hierarchy of serif and sans-serif styles. Composition changes by content type while page furniture remains stable.

Image treatment and captions

Primary image treatment: natural or restrained duotone, consistent focal crop, and enough contrast for adjacent type.

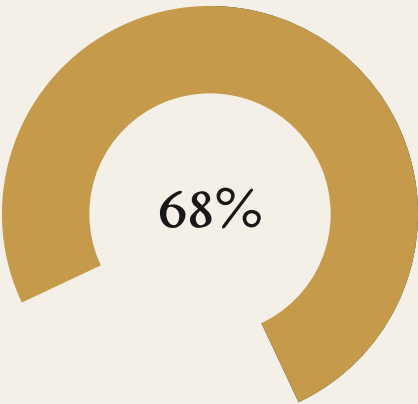

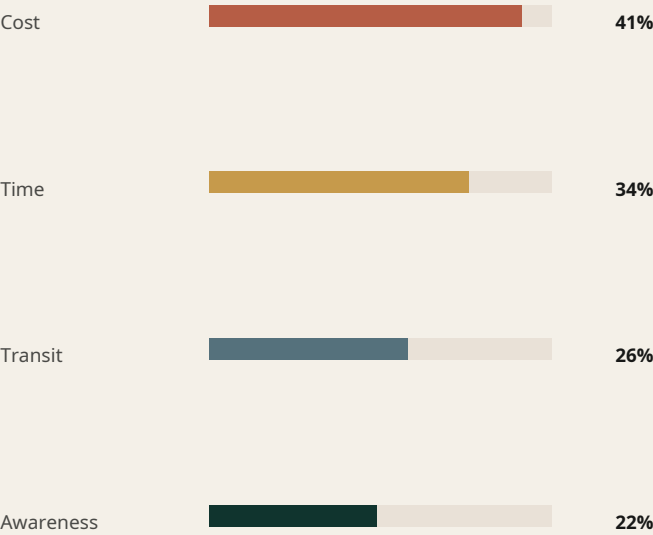

Captions use direct description first, followed by sequence or source information. Text never sits over a busy image without a contrast field.

CAPTION EXAMPLE

03 / A repeated architectural threshold creates orientation through scale and light. Concept image.

Information-design rules

- Direct labels replace avoidable legends.
- Values remain visible without relying on color.
- Charts align to the same page grid as essays.
- Source notes and modeled-data labels stay attached to the figure.
